CAPT. JAMES B. BURBANK'S REPORT ON THE NATIONAL GUARD.

While the Troops Are Composed of Excellent Staterial, He Says That in Every Organiza-tion There Was a Noticeable Lack of In-struction in the School of the Soldier.

ALBANY, May 1.—The report of Capt. James B. Burbank, Third Artillery, U. S. A., who is on duty at the Adjutant-General's office here to observe the workings of the National Guard, together with the comments of Col. Robert H. Hall of the Fourth Infantry, U. S. A., have just been made public. The report reviews the observations of these two regular army officers on the work of the Guard at the State Camp of Instruction at Peckskill last season. Capt. Burbank was frequently asked his opinion regarding criticisms on the Guard contained in the report issued by former Inspector-General McLewee at the close of last rear. He refused to make any public statements. His report has just been officially promulgated by the War Department at Washington, and Capt. Burbank thinks it speaks for itself. The report says in part:

"The instruction accorded the ambulance and hospital corps was seemingly thorough, and was both practical and theoretical, but it may be questioned whether purely professional instruc-tion was not too much sacrificed for military

The Signal Corps are properly organized and in efficient condition. They are a thoroughly In efficient condition. They are a thoroughly efficient body of men in their special duties.

"The State camp, with the exception of its limited area, is a model in all respects. It is provided with everything except barracks and "The First, Second, and Sixth batteries are in excellent condition. The Fifth Battery has bsolete guns, for which ammunition cannot be furnished, and the old type of wooden carriages, which are too unserviceable to take into the field.

"The Remington rifles used by the infantry might be considered serviceable for street work and drills, but unserviceable for the field. The Springfield rifle, calibre 45, would be far better in every respect until the question of small arms, both as to type and calibre, has passed the experimental stage. The armament of the cavalry and artillery in camp was seemingly in good condition, but that of the infantry, which could be observed more closely, was not invariably so. Very many of the pieces were dirty, even rusty, and showed lack of common care. Certainly some of the armor-pieces were dirty, even rusty, and showed lack of common care. Certainly some of the armorers have been very negligent in this matter. Shoes are not provided by the State. As a consequence many of the infantrymen appeared on duty with shoes which, even on a short march, would inevitably cripple the wearer.

"At the drills and coremonies in camp a noticeable defect in every organization was the lack of instruction, or sufficient instruction in the school of the soldier. The rudimentary drill is so generally neglected that much valuable time was lost in teaching in camp what should have been thoroughly acquired by the men at their home stations. The leaders of squads and sections in extended order were generally hesitating in manner and without the self-confidence that comes with greater familiarity with their duties, and there resulted, of course, an utter lack of alertness and snap which should characterize this drill. This hesitancy sometimes extended to the commissioned grades, and then the drill became ridiculous. Some of the organizations were so deficient in instruction in close order that extended-order drills wers with them not even attempted. In the ceren.enies there were at first many errors. As the close of the week approached, the parades were conducted with greater accuracy, as were also the guard mountings, although in this last ceremony there was always much to be desired. The review at the close of each week was always a creditable exhibition of steadiness in ranks and of marching. The drills of the batteries were schools of the drivers. They were not supervised with sufficient care to cause the correction of errors of intervals and distances, and even at the last the drivers were in need of much instruction. The personnel of the State troops is generally excellent. That better results are not obtained from material usually so good is because, as already suggested, the rudimentary drill is defective, or possibly neglected. This seems particularly unfortunate when there is such general intelligenc duty. There was no outpost duty during the encampment."

Col. Hall's recommendations are:

"In my judgment the interests of the State forces would be advanced by a more intimate association with the regular troops. If a company of each arm of the service, equipped for the field and having its own camp equipage and field mess outfit, were kept at the camp during the entire season, the State troops would be given an object lesson in discipline and camp economy by which they would be sure to profit. The camp, as prepared for occupancy by State troops, bears little resemblance to the camps of actual service. Great good would accrue to the State troops if detachments of them were to accompany regular troops on practice marches, conforming in all things to the conditions which govern the regular service. The experience probably would not be enjoyable, but it would convey lessons which might be invaluable and would assuredly be of use." Capt. Burbank makes these closing remarks:

Capt. Burbank makes these closing remarks:

"Apart from the willingness to promote close obligations between the regular service and the National Guard, by bringing them together in field and camp, it is improbable that the general Government can be of any especial immediate aid to the guard. Under the stringent limitations as to time employed, the amount of work performed is worthy of strong approval, and the seal and intelligence thrown into the discharge of all military duties can but evoke admiration from those brought into immediate contact with the personnel of the Guard of this State. The Adjutant-General and headquarters staff are well aware of the needs of the situation, and are working intelligently and persistently towards higher development. One emphatic want in the routine of yearly work is evident, that is, some field of action for staff officers, and the opportunity, which they ardently desire, to learn and practise those onerous and important functions which so suddenly fall on them when necessity calls the Guard for duty. However, the want is profoundly apprediated, and the fact of its apprediation is sound proof that the remedy will soon follow."

Is still laughing at NEVER AGAIN "If you happen to stand in the lobby of the Garrick Theatrs, say about 10 o'clock any evening, and hear wild shricks and tunultuous yells bursting through the doors, don't mind it. You are not in a cray house. It is merely the way our sober citizens and citizenesses have of expressing their satisfaction with the farce 'Never Austn.'"—Herald.
